The assumption by global depositors who have entrusted their national savings with the Federal Reserve and US Government has always been that when they request to repatriate their holdings the Fed would simply open the vault, access said assets and ship them back to where they belong.

Well, Ceausescu fell because of the dissolving of the Iron Curtain. The Iron Curtain came down because of the literal crumbling of the Berlin Wall. The Berlin Wall came down because the Soviet economy crashed. The Soviet economy crashed because the Soviet Ruble (not the Russian Ruble) was made worthless. Guess what man (Specifically [operationally] one man. Others on same "task force" were involved, including a U.S. President (Ronald W Reagan), and two DCIs.(Colby/Casey) was responsible for that?

I will simply use the very same words that author Marilyn Macgruder Barnewall uses:
"Rather than asking me why I support him, I think the better question is: Why aren't you and all other Americans supporting Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta?"

My sentiments exactly.

Enough excuses! Time for action.

IS THE AMERICAN DREAM DEAD?

By Marilyn MacGruder Barnewall

October 27, 2013

NewsWithViews.com

Is it called "The American Dream" because you have to be asleep to believe it? Comedian George Carlin once said so.

We Americans have lost a lot in the past 25 years... you can mark the beginning of our losses to the beginning of the Presidency of George Herbert Walker Bush who took office in 1989 and who it appears, as the former CIA Director, brought to the White House with him an army made up of rogue intelligence operatives. Bush also brought with him the concept of a "New World Order."

What is among the most disgusting losses is a burden borne by our military and its veterans. About a month ago, the federal government had sufficient funds to be only a hair's breadth away from dropping bombs on Syria, but two weeks later could not afford to keep open military memorials so those who provide our freedom could visit them.

Far more serious problems resulting from the recent government shutdown were added to the burdens that are a normal part of any military family's day-to-day existence. For example, VA Hospital health care is protected by a 2009 law passed by the Congress to fund VA health care a year in advance but under the recent closure things like disability, pension and GI Bill payments were under threat of non-payment. All October payments had already been sent at the time of the shutdown, but the VA announced that if it lasted longer than two or three weeks, November's payments might not be made due to a shortage of cash.

You just don't do that to people who have put their lives on the line to protect our nation!

Vets who filed VA claims found there were delays in processing them. No new claims were processed at all during the shutdown. All disability claims and appeals were halted. Over 7,000 Veterans Benefits Administration employees and close to 3,000 Information Technicians were put on furlough. But we could afford to expand our war effort in the Middle East to include Syria just two weeks before the shutdown? We're not talking about someone needing care for a strained back here. We're talking about people who have lost arms and legs and eyes!

There was tremendous confusion regarding orders that had been issued prior to the shutdown. Orders issued after the shutdown on October 1 – especially AT, TDY, ADT and ADOS – might still be valid or they might not be valid. Who knew? No one... even up the chain of command.

Perhaps the unpaid military benefits that resounded most loudly with the American people was the removal of death benefits. The $100,000 death benefit and travel expenses for family members wanting to go to Dover AFB for the return of their loved one's body or to attend the soldier's military funeral were unavailable and caused a national furor. The privately-owned Fisher House Foundation stepped forward and paid for these services. Legislation was rapidly passed to correct the problem, but it should not have occurred. Burials at national cemeteries run by the Department of Defense, were (at the very least) delayed, too.

It seemed apparent to the civilian world watching the unfolding of the government shutdown that the Obama Administration was using the military (perhaps because as the military's Commander in Chief the President of the United States maintains more control over the military than he does over the rest of us?) for political gain. Specifically, the Barack Obamas and the Harry Reids and the Nancy Pelosis of the world wanted us – that's you and me – to blame the Republicans for the cruelties resulting from the government shutdown. As we all know, the House Republicans passed and sent to the Democrat-controlled Senate legislation that funded every government program with the exception of Obamacare and so most of the sacrifices, civilian and military, were unnecessary. The Democrats in the Senate refused to approve the funding. Most of us know that. Many Democrats will deny it, but it is the truth.

The military has been hit in many ways beyond those that get publicized. For example:

The U.S. Senate failed to pass legislation that prevents veterans from losing gun ownership rights if they are deemed incapable of handling their financial affairs. If a veteran comes home from Afghanistan (or came home from Iraq) blind or unable to write a check to pay bills, the Senate (under the leadership of Senator Harry Reid and the Democrats) voted 56-44 to deny such injured veterans the right to own firearms.

Senator Richard Burr (R-NC) sponsored the amendment rejected by the Democrats to enable veterans whose Second Amendment rights were being violated because they were declared incapable of handling their own financial affairs. Burr stated that the lives of 129,000 vets had been impacted. The Senate Democrats voted Senator Burr's legislation down.

The decision as to whether a veteran can enjoy his or her Second Amendment rights to own firearms is made by a benefits administrator, not by a mental health professional, said Burr who is the ranking Republican on the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee. "The current process is arbitrary. It does not look at whether they represent a danger to themselves or to others, and it is in no way relevant to whether the individual should have access to firearms."

The current process, however, is approved by the Veterans Administration which submitted a statement to the House Veterans' Affairs Committee saying that current procedures allow a veteran to have firearms rights restored by either getting the incompetency determination reversed or by petitioning the VA to have their firearms rights restored on the basis that "the individual poses no threat to public safety."

In addition to losing Second Amendment rights, soldiers attending a pre-deployment briefing at Fort Hood say they were told that evangelical Christians and members of the Tea Party were a threat to the nation and that any soldier donating to those groups would be subjected to punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The attacks against military freedom of religion have been fast and furious. So much for the protections of the First Amendment, too. Isn't one of the primary purposes of our military to protect the loss of our constitutional rights – but they cannot protect their own? Hmmm....

And all of us need to watch a recent CBS News broadcast about VA Hospitals. It explains how VA employees involved in deaths caused by the hospitals are getting large bonuses:

You and I expect people of sufficient intelligence to put their lives at risk so we can enjoy our comfortable American lifestyles while they fight this political war about Afghan poppies and the heroin that comes from them, a war about oil and gas and pipelines (the reasons for the Obama/Kerry decision to bomb Syria), the rejection of the central bank concept that is destroying the world's economies (the reason for Libya) to willingly allow the U.S. Government to take from them their Second Amendment rights? They should willingly accept the fact that because they are sufficiently disabled that they cannot pay their bills so that makes them too dangerous to own firearms?

The way veterans and military personnel are treated makes me wonder why any of them would want to serve a nation bereft of moral character and abusive of those who serve. Some day you may wonder, too – like when we no longer have a volunteer military because people refuse to serve and accept the abuse.

One of the questions I have been asked many times regarding my support of Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta is why do I willingly place my name and reputation at risk over such a controversial issue. One of the major reasons has to do with making sure our military personnel are properly treated.

I have now finished writing Wanta's official biography and feel better able to comment on such issues. You can find the book, WANTA! Black Swan, White Hat at the Amazon.com Web site. It is available on Kindle. It is not available in print because the links to hundreds of pages of documents cannot be made part of a printed book. This man's life is so incredible, the links providing evidence of truthful commentary is essential for his history to be believable.

First, there is no doubt the U.S. Government stole the money Wanta raised to pay the debt of this nation when it became a threat to national economic stability – THAT WOULD BE NOW. Second, Lee Wanta has put together programs to stimulate new jobs, return America's manufacturing base to help stimulate economic growth and to build a high-speed rail system that will not only create two million new jobs (with full benefits – and it won't impact just America but Canada, too), and at the base of these two objectives is a training and benefit program for our veterans. Others will qualify too, but the program is directed at vets.

Anyone who has read WANTA! Black Swan, White Hat, knows the story about his creation of the largest fortune in history by one man -- $27.5 trillion – is accurate. There are hundreds of pages of documents linked to the manuscript to prove that what is said throughout the book is the truth. But there wasn't room in the biography for me to write about the programs Wanta intends to implement with his funds once he receives them – and he will, eventually, receive them. His biography has generated much curiosity – and many angry nations, including China – around the world and it cannot be ignored forever.

Chapter 15 of the biography explains Wanta's plan for high-speed rail and why such a program is of critical importance to the United States. Here, however, are some items the book does not cover (there just wasn't room for a complete explanation of them):

1. Work with the numerous trade schools already in business (including those who teach construction skills at the Salvation Army) and pay for training veterans returning from service (and other qualified candidates). In addition to training them in the trade of their choice, teach them to run their own plumbing or roofing or tiling or electrical or carpeting businesses. Provide capital for their business startup.

2. Offer additional training to those who are interested and whose skills qualify them to start companies (capital provided) that manufacture the products most commonly used by plumbers, roofers, tilers, electricians, carpeters, and carpenters, etc.).

At the moment, most of the products we use in America are made in China... we all know that it began with NAFTA. The quality of the products goes beyond questionable to very low quality. I had a costly plumbing repair made recently. Two days later, the problem (a leak) returned. The plumber apologized. He said the parts the plumbing supply shops get from China must be returned and the customers' problems re-addressed nearly half of the time. Why? Poor quality plumbing products from China.

Lee Wanta understands that capitalism (as defined by its creator, Adam Smith) is the result of millions of shopkeepers and independent businesses, not multi-national companies whose only loyalties are to the cheapest pool of international labor available to serve their product needs. He understands that if products can be made by unemployed, untrained people who become trained, and the products can be made at competitive prices, it will allow us to regain a small portion of our manufacturing base and build on it.

The only price people (not just veterans, but all people) will pay for the training he wants to provide to create tradesmen and women is a promise from them to purchase their products from those who will provide American made products at a reasonable cost. These companies who will be manufacturing American made products are not intended to grow into giant companies, just independent businesses large enough to serve the needs of their communities.

Those are not the only programs Wanta plans to provide to help heal the wounds of our stupidly run economy. Many people, including myself, believe the "stupidly run economy" has been an intentional effort to destroy the American Republic. For those readers who have forgotten, we are a Constitutional Republic, not a democracy.

Finally, certain of the Wanta funds will go to buying or building apartment buildings to provide a free place for the families of veterans whose loved ones must suffer extensive stays in Veterans Administration Hospitals. There is a children's burn treatment center planned in Phoenix, AZ. ... there are many plans.

For those of you who have wondered why my support of this patriot has been so firm and unshakeable, I can only say the above programs outlining Wanta's plans are just the beginning...

but there's no more room here to discuss how a floor can be put under the real estate market and how to force the unlawful foreclosures by too big to jail banksters to stop, cease and desist.

Rather than asking me why I support him, I think the better question is: Why aren't you and all other Americans supporting Ambassador Lee Emil Wanta?

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
WASHINGTON, D.C.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

August 26, 2013

The Honorable John A. Boehner
Speaker
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Speaker:

I am writing to provide additional information regarding the Treasury Department's ability to continue to finance the government, and the extraordinary measures we have undertaken in order to avoid default. On May 17, I wrote to inform you that the U.S. government had reached the statutory debt limit and had begun to implement extraordinary measures. As I stated in that letter, Congress should act as soon as possible to protect America's good credit by extending normal borrowing authority well before any risk of default becomes imminent.

Based on our latest estimates, extraordinary measures are projected to be exhausted in the middle of October. At that point, the United States will have reached the limit of its borrowing authority, and Treasury would be left to fund the government with only the cash we have on hand on any given day. The cash balance at that time is currently forecasted to be approximately $50 billion.

Operating the government with no borrowing authority, and with only the cash on hand on a given day, would place the United States in an unacceptable position. The government makes approximately 80 million payments a month, including social security checks, military salaries, Medicare reimbursements, and many others. A cash balance of approximately $50 billion would be insufficient to cover net expenditures for an extended period of time. And, on certain days, net expenditures could exceed such a cash balance.

Moreover, it is not possible for us to estimate with any precision the date on which Treasury would exhaust its cash in this situation. The rate at which cash will be drawn down depends on factors that are inherently variable and irregular, including the unpredictability of tax receipts, changes in expenditure flows under sequestration, and the willingness of investors to re-invest in, or "roll over," Treasury securities. If investors should become unwilling to loan the United States money, the United States could face an immediate cash shortfall. Indeed, such a scenario could undermine financial markets and result in significant disruptions to our economy.

Extending borrowing authority does not increase government spending; it simply allows the Treasury to pay for expenditures Congress has previously approved. Protecting the full faith and credit of the United States is the responsibility of Congress because only Congress can extend the nation's borrowing authority. Failure to meet that responsibility would cause irreparable harm to the American economy.

As I have stated previously, Congress should act as soon as possible to meet its responsibility to the nation and to remove the threat of default. Under any circumstance—in light of its schedule, the inherent variability of cash flows, and the dire consequences of miscalculation—Congress must act before the middle of October.

Sincerely,

Jacob J. Lew

The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the United States, General Martin Dempsey, backed by his Joint Staff generals and admirals, stood between a hasty and knee-jerk President Obama who was intent on launching a military attack on Syria and a tenuous peace in the Middle East. As of the evening of Friday, August 29, President Obama was on track to launch a sustained 72-hour cruise missile and drone attack on pre-selected air defense and other strategic military targets in Syria. President Obama with his Deputy National Security Adviser Benjamin Rhodes. Source: LibertyNews.com

Obama had been convinced by his national security adviser Susan Rice, UN ambassador Samantha Power, and deputy national security adviser Ben Rhodes, all «Responsibility to Protect» advocates, that he could trump congressional approval for his attack by claiming that humanitarian operations do not require approval under the War Powers Resolution or Article I, Section 8 of the U.S. Constitution. Rhodes, who lacks any military experience, as is also the case with Rice and Power, is in his position because of his family ties. Rhodes's brother, David Rhodes, formerly an executive with Fox News, is the president of CBS News. In addition, the brother of Obama's special adviser, Dr. Elizabeth Sherwood-Randall, is Ben Sherwood,

President of ABC News. Power is married to Obama's former «information czar» Cass Sunstein, who developed methods to combat information unfriendly to the president through campaigns of «cognitive dissonance». Many of Washington's insiders went to bed Friday night firmly convinced that Obama would give the final order to attack Syria sometime during the early Saturday morning hours of August 30. However, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Martin Dempsey, made a hurried trip to the White House during the early morning hours of Saturday to make one last final plea to hold off on any attack. Dempsey told Obama that the president's military plan would not work. «If you do this, the plan will fail and you'll get in deeper. And without congressional approval, you'll be screwed,» Dempsey told Obama. Dempsey's warning about Congress had merit. Already, 210 House members, Republicans and Democrats, signed a letter to Obama warning him not to attack Syria without congressional authorization.

At least temporarily, Dempsey's argument prevailed and Obama decided to hold off on any attack until Congress reconvened after Labor Day. Obama decided he would seek a congressional vote to authorize a military strike on Syria. Administration officials, including Secretary of State John Kerry and Vice President Joe Biden, began arms twisting members of Congress to approve Obama's military operation against Syria.

The Israeli Lobby organization, American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) weighed in with its considerable political heft to force members of Congress with whom its showers with campaign contributions, to fall in line behind Obama's war plans.

During the evening of September 1, The New York Times initially reported Israeli involvement in lobbying Congress on its website: «One administration official, who, like others, declined to be identified discussing White House strategy, called AIPAC 'the 800-pound gorilla in the room,' and said its allies in Congress had to be saying, 'If the White House is not capable of enforcing this red line' against the catastrophic use of chemical weapons, 'we're in trouble'».

The newspaper quickly took down the report after it appeared in its web edition.

AIPAC's financial largesse bestowed upon members of the U.S. Senate is witnessed by its chief recipients being the loudest supporters of military action against Syria. The second largest recipient of AIPAC money from 2006 to 2012 — $772,327 — is Arizona Republican Senator John McCain, who has been a champion of Syrian rebels, including the human organ-eating guerrillas of the Jabhat al Nusra, an Al Qaeda-affiliate.

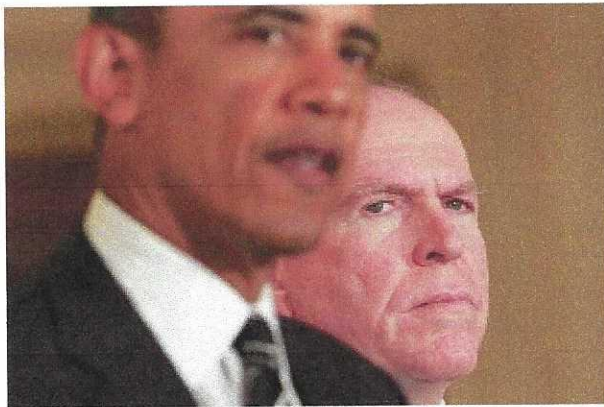

Another major recipient of AIPAC cash is New Jersey Democratic Senator Robert Menendez who has rung up $343,394 in AIPAC donations. Menendez, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was tasked by the Obama White House to shepherd its Syria attack resolution to final approval.

In temporarily overriding Rice, Power, Rhodes, and Kerry, who all favored a Labor Day weekend military strike, Dempsey incurred the wrath of the R2P faction that dominates the National Security Council. State Department sources began spreading the word that Obama would still attack Syria without congressional approval.

The Pentagon, on the other hand, pointed out that none of the National Security Council «heavies,» Rice, Power, or Rhodes, had any military experience and that Kerry was channeling the wishes of his good friend Senator John McCain, who has consistently supported Al Qaeda-led rebels in Syria and Libya.

Obama is faced with another grim reality. Some within the Pentagon ranks are so displeased with Obama's policies on Syria, they have let certain members of Congress of both parties know that «smoking gun» proof exists that Obama and CIA director John O. Brennan personally authorized the transfer of arms and personnel from Al-Qaeda-linked Ansar al Sharia Islamist rebels in Libya to Syria's Jabhat al Nusra rebels, who are also linked to Al Qaeda, in what amounts to an illegal «Iran-contra»-like scandal. The proof is said to be highly «impeachable».

Barack Obama and CIA Director John Brennan.

When the documented proof is released that Obama and Brennan, the latter the point man who oversees operations involving Saudi intelligence chief Prince Bandar bin Sultan al Saud and Al Qaeda, were personally aware that arms from the caches of the late Muammar Qaddafi of Libya were transferred to Al Qaeda forces in Syria for use in terrorist attacks, there will be demands for impeachment hearings. The arms transfer was directly involved in the Libyan Islamist rebel attack on the CIA annex in Benghazi on September 11, 2012, an event from which Obama has not been able to extricate himself.

Bandar, who has been nicknamed «Bandar Bush» by members of the Bush family because of his close ties to them and «Bandar bin Israel» because of his close links to the Israeli intelligence agency Mossad, is the principal player in seeking the overthrow of the Bashar al Assad government in Damascus.

Bandar is carrying out a Saudi policy that would see the Syrian government replaced with a Sunni fundamentalist regime that would circumscribe the rights of Christians, Alawites, and Shi'as, essentially how Saudi Arabia today treats not Sunni Wahhabis within its borders.

One of the reasons why Obama and his cohorts have cracked down on whistleblowers in a manner unprecedented in recent U.S. history is to limit the fallout from military and intelligence professionals coming forth with details on how Obama, like his predecessor, has «cooked» the intelligence to pave the way to war.

In this case, White House intelligence charging Syria for using chemical weapons is solely based on dubious signals intercepts provided by Israel. Not only is intelligence on the rebels' use of chemical weapons in Damascus and Homs, sarin gas in Damascus and chlorine gas in Homs, being suppressed but National Security Agency and British Government Communications Headquarters (GCHQ) intercepts from the Mount Troodos facility in Cyprus directly contradict signals intelligence by Israel's Unit 8200 that purportedly show that Syrian army commanders ordered the sarin gas attack on Ghouta on August 21.

The White House finds itself relying on the use of propaganda and disinformation to stake its phony claims. The BBC has been caught using photographs of dead civilians in Iraq to show «victims» of Assad's alleged chemical attack. Likewise, Al Jazeera, a conduit for the Muslim Brotherhood power brokers in Qatar has shown footage of «victims» of Assad's government covered with fake bandages and Hollywood «blood».

Men and woman in U.S. military are acutely aware that Obama and his advisers are lying in order to get the U.S. involved in another quagmire in a Muslim nation. This time, the generals and admirals are standing with their ranks in opposing another Obama «war of choice» in support of Saudi Salafist expansion and Israeli regional imperialism.
