LIRGENT Aler Fictitious EXERCISE? A AND FEMA

CONFIRMING

NASA and FEMA prepare for Sept 20 Asteroid impact in California, off coast: Documents reveal

The question we must now ask is: will the drill go live? Actual asteroid to make its close approach to Earth on Sept 20!

> By Shepard Ambellas -August 21, 2020

The National Aeronautics Space Administration and FEMA in 2017 devised and initiated a supposed fictitious scenario in which the two agencies would drill down on an asteroid that's set to impact the Earth in or just off the coast of California on September 20, 2020, but is this so-called "exercise" really just a drill?

NASA claims "the simulation was designed to strengthen the collaboration between the two agencies, which have Administration direction to lead the U.S. response" but could the drill actually go live like so many other drills have in the past? (i.e. the July 7, 2007, London bombing, the September 11, 2001 attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, and others)

"It's not a matter of if—but when—we will deal with such a situation," Associate Administrator for NASA's Science Mission Directorate Thomas Zurbuchen said. "But unlike any other time in our history, we now have the ability to respond to an impact threat through continued observations, predictions, response planning and mitigation."

The exercise was designed to create "a forum for the planetary science community to show how it would collect, analyze and share data about a hypothetical asteroid predicted to impact Earth. Emergency managers discussed how that data would be used to consider some of the unique challenges an asteroid impact would present-for preparedness, response and public warning," according to NASA.

Representatives from NASA, FEMA, NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the Department of Energy's National Laboratories, the U.S. Air Force, and the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services attended the initial meeting and will be participating throughout the 4 year long excersise which is set to come to a head on Sept 20, 2020.

"It is critical to exercise these kinds of low-probability but high-consequence disaster scenarios," FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate said. "By working through our emergency response plans now, we will be better prepared if and when we need to respond to such an event."

The exercise simulates a possible impact four years from now in which, according to NASA, "a fictitious asteroid imagined to have been discovered this fall with a 2 percent probability of impact with Earth on Sept. 20, 2020. The simulated asteroid was initially estimated to be between 300 and 800 feet (100 and 250 meters) in size, with a possibility of making impact anywhere along a long swath of Earth, including a narrow band of area that crossed the entire United States."

"In the fictitious scenario, observers continued to track the asteroid for three months using ground-based https://mail.google.com/mail/u/0?ik=b58d8de0d6&view=pt&search=all&permthid=thread-f%3A1675655857232234095&simpl=msg-f%3A1675655857232234095 telescope observations, and the probability of impact climbed to 65 percent. Then the next observations had to wait until four months later, due to the asteroid's position relative to the sun. Once observations could resume in May of 2017, the impact probability jumped to 100 percent. By November of 2017, it was simulated that the predicted impact would occur somewhere in a narrow band across Southern California or just off the coast in the Pacific Ocean."

NASA, Jet Propulsion Laboratory,

To make matters worse, NASA has recently listed a real asteroid (not part of the drill) as making its close approach to Earth on Sept 20.

The object dubbed 2017 SL16 just so happens to have been discovered in 2017 which corolates with the drill initiation date.

This raises a major red flag.

2017 SL16 Close Approach Data (NASA, JPL, CNEOS)

Making the scenario even more dramatic, role-players did not allow for deflection or mitigation of the earthbound asteroid and instead opted to forcefully evacuate residents from the city of Los Angeles.

"While mounting a deflection mission to move the asteroid off its collision course had been simulated in previous tabletop exercises, this particular exercise was designed so that the time to impact was too short for a deflection mission to be feasible — to pose a great future challenge to emergency managers faced with a mass evacuation of the metropolitan Los Angeles area."

NASA, Jet Propulsion Laboratory,

"Scientists from JPL, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Sandia National Laboratories, and The Aerospace Corporation presented predicted impact footprint models, population displacement estimates, information on infrastructure that would be affected, as well as other data that could realistically be known at various points throughout the exercise scenario," NASA reports.

"The high degree of initial uncertainty coupled with the relatively long impact warning time made this scenario unique and especially challenging for emergency managers," FEMA National Response Coordination Branch Chief Leviticus A. Lewis said. "It's quite different from preparing for an event with a much shorter timeline, such as a hurricane."

As a caveat, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo stated back in March that we are in a "live exercise," potentially letting the cat out of the bag.

United States Secretary of State Mike Pompeo had a slip of the tongue while addressing the American people from the White House when he stated that COVID-19 is a live military exercise.

"This is not about retribution," Pompeo explained. "This matter is going forward — we are in a live exercise here to get this right."

With a disgusted look on his face, President Trump replied: "You should have let us know."

Military Exercise meaning (from Wikipedia): "A military exercise or war game is the employment of military resources in training for military operations, either exploring the effects of warfare or testing strategies without actual combat. This also serves the purpose of ensuring the combat readiness of garrisoned or deployable forces prior to deployment from a home base."

The question we must now ask is: will the drill go live?

The Death Of Vincent Foster

The Gun Color Swindle by the FBI

The ABC TV Photograph.

The following photograph was leaked by the White House to the Reuter's News Agency, from which it made its way to the ABC Television network where it was aired on Friday, Match 11, 1994.

The Gun Color. Proof of deliberate FBI deception.

Of particular note in the above photo is the color of the gun itself. It's dark metal, a fact confirmed by the official record of the first Senate investigation, which discovered that the gun was assembled from parts of two different Colt revolvers. There were 2 different serial numbers stamped on the pieces/parts indicating that originally serial #356555 was purchased on 09-14-13 at the Seattle Hardware Co., Seattle, WA., and serial #355055 was purchased on 12-29-13 at Gus Hasich Co., Indianapolis, IN.

the FBI's FD-302a of the Lisa Foster Interview

The following four scans are taken from the FBI's FD-302a, the official record of the FBI interview with Lisa Foster following the discovery of her husband's body in Fort Marcy Park.

The red underlining is mine. The black marks were on the document as scanned and the blank areas with question marks were deleted prior to the release of the document. Note that the gun shown to Lisa Foster is described as a silver colored gun no less than three times! The sentence which begins at the bottom of page 16 (third image) and ends at the top of page 17 (fourth image) leaves no doubt that Lisa Foster is convinced that a silver colored gun was found with her husband.

How the above was used in the Fiske Report.

Immediatly above are the two pages (plus cover) of the Fiske Report that deal with the gun. I've underlined the passages which reflect the conclusions reached in the FBI's FD-302a regarding how the silver gun was brought to Washington D.C. Note that any mention of the gun color, black or silver, is avoided.

What does the above evidence mean?

It is clear that Lisa Foster was shown a gun she recognized, even though that gun she was shown was clearly NOT the gun in the photograph of Vincent Foster's hand in the ABC TV photograph.

Were the death of Vincent Foster a true suicide, there would be no need to ask the FBI to help manufacture evidence. Everything would fit together. Given that the FBI did indeed show the wrong gun to Lisa Foster, we must conclude that we may not be dealing with a real suicide. And if we are not dealing with a real suicide, then we are dealing with a murder!

The "Ditz" theory.

Recently, certain individuals, questioning whether the FBI would actually engage in such a crime as to manufacture evidence (and unaware of the COINTELPRO scandal) have put forward the theory that Lisa Foster, for whatever reason, was unable to distinguish between a black and silver gun.

While I do not subscribe to this interpretation of the evidence in the FBI's fd-302a, I do wish to point out that the mere fact that Lisa Foster is talking about a silver gun invalidates her testimony. The Fiske Report's conclusion that Foster used his own gun, being based solely on the FBI's fd-302a, is destroyed, and with it, the conclusion of suicide, based partly on the aforesaid conclusion of Foster's using his own gun, is now in doubt.

The "She's Lying" theory.

Still another theory has been put forward that Lisa Foster was lying to the FBI. Were that true, why would she even use the word "silver" in describing the family gun, and why would the FBI interviewers write down such obviously useless testimony, > then transcribe it to the typed report?

The "Placeholder" theory: Where did the silver gun come from?

One question arises at this point. Just where did the FBI obtain the gun shown to Lisa Foster, the gun she did recognize as one belonging to Vincent?

During his testimony in the Whitewater Hearings, ex Assistant Attorney General Webster Hubbel, in describing his actions FOLLOWING the discovery of Foster's body, stated,"We searched for Vince Foster's gun in his house".

"We searched for Vince Foster's gun in his house"

That is a very odd thing to do with the deceased's hands clutching the gun he supposedly shot himself in the mouth with.

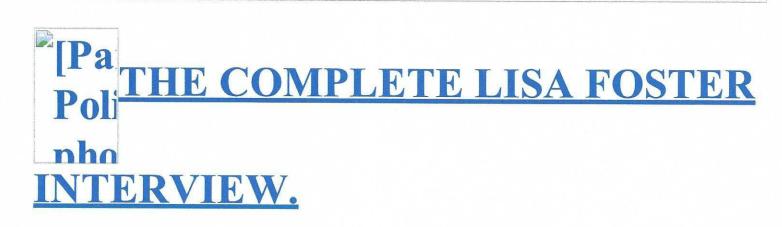

Webster's statement only makes logical sense if he searched for Vince Foster's gun in his house to find and TAKE a gun to show to Lisa Foster to help sell the apparent suicide, not expecting a photo of the real suicide gun to hit the TV news.

It's likely that the dark blued gun found with Foster was a mere "placeholder", intended to be later traded for Foster's real gun. But the plan was ruined when Foster's real gun turned out to be silver. The cover-up was then stuck with the dark blued steel gun, with no fingerprints on it.

In any event, at the time Foster's body was discovered, Webster Hubbel was eating dinner with his family in a restaurant and appeared to be in a generally good mood. Hardly consistant with a man who knows a murder of a high ranking official and former law partner is taking place. When informed of the discovery of Foster's body, Webster is reported to have displayed genuine surprise and shock.

Ergo, unless Webster Hubbell is a masterful actor, the death of Vincent Foster caught him by surprise. His actions following may make him an accessory after the fact, but I do not believe he is the murderer.

But I firmly believe he knows who is.
